People who are interested in a more balanced approach to education reform will enjoy this free film, which will be followed by an engaging discussion about problems and solutions in our community. This event, at Durham's North Regional Library Auditorium at 2:30pm, is recommended for anyone who believes that children have the right to a free, quality education, regardless of race, ability or social status. Participants will be given questions to consider as they watch the film. The goals of this gathering include expanding awareness and engagement regarding public school reform, offering a public opportunity to discuss issues relevant to Durham, and to prioritize goals for productive school reform for our community.
